Dear Bill:

The dinner for John McCone on the occasion of the presentation to him of The William J. Donovan Medal was a delightful affair.

Your address was splendid, and I would be grateful if you would arrange to send me a copy as I would like to have Laura read it. We both regretted that because of her fractured leg she could not attend and, thus, missed a very special evening.

After we have both had an opportunity to read your talk, I would like to have it in my personal library.

Congratulations again, Bill, and warm personal regards.

Most sincerely
